COMMERCE LAW AMENDMENTS.

Bill Providing Them Now Before Both Houses of Congress.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.- The bill prepared by the executive committee of the interstate-commerce law convention profor failure to enforce the liquor laws. He posing amendments to the interstate-commerce act is now before both branches of Sunday and all night during the week, and | Congress. It was offered in the Senate during the past week by Senator Nelson, of Minnesota, and was presented in the such disregard of the law by the counte- | House early in January by Representative Corliss, of Michigan. The Elkins bill, representing the railroad ideas on the subject, was also introduced in the Senate during the past week. The introduction of this measure and the Nelson-Corliss bill bears out predictions recently made that the broad-minded transportation interests of the United States would join with the commercial interests in seeking legislation UNION TRACTION CO. OF INDIANA to correct the disastrous conditions exist-

Mr. Frank Barry, of Milwaukee, secretary of the League of National Associations, who has charge of the shippers' cause here, gives the following comparative analysis of the Elkins bill and the Nelson-

"The Elkins bill limits the time within which the order of the commission shall ern in construction and equipment, cost- be effective to one year instead of two, as ing about $11,000 with furniture and car- in our bill, and omits the provision giving pets. Most of the debt was paid and the the commission power to extend its decisions, which is clearly necessary for proper protection of the public. The Elkins bill provides that an order of the commission shall be suspended pending proceedings in review in court unless ordered otherwise. The Nelson-Corliss bill provides that the filing by the carrier of a petition for review shall of itself suspend the order for thirty days, and that the court may further suspend such order if found to be based upon error of law or unjust or unreasonable upon the facts. We maintain that it would be unwise to suspend the commission's orders during review unless good cause shall appear. "The Elkins bill provides that the court shall hear the case upon the record before the commission, and such additional testimony as the court may decide necessary shall be taken, while our bill provides that the commission under the direction of the court. While this may appear to be a slight difference, it is a vital one.

"The Elkins bill apparently makes the commission the defendant in proceedings for the review of its orders. Our bill makes the United States the defendant, which is the more appropriate provision. The commission should not be required to appear in court to defend its orders, and the record in the case should speak for itself. The Elkins bill authorizes the carriers to contract for division of their traffic or earnings, or, in other words, to 'pool. This section is a radical railroad provision, While probably 90 per cent, of the shippers of this country would be willing that the railroads might enter into traffic agreements, subject to disapproval of the commission. I believe that there are very few shippers who would be willing to have this section enacted, repealing, as it does, the anti-pooling provision of the act and the anti-trust law so far as it affects rail-

"Our bill is silent upon the question of traffic agreements. Without going into the merits of the pooling question, it may be said that if pooling is permitted an or- | tificates to graduates of the S. S. Still Colder of the commission annulling the contract or making changes in rates or practices thereunder should be final and conclusive. The Elkins bill provides for a minimum fine of $1,000, which, I think it graduates of any college of osteopathy on must be conceded, is too small a penalty. Our bill provides for a minimum penalty of $5,000, which is small enough to insure the proper observance of the law." In its final report to Congress on the subject of transportation, just made pubic, the Industrial Commission, in the which then declared that no school of osstrongest possible terms, recommends leg- teopathy could maintain a satisfactory islation amending the interstate-commerce | standard.

"To the end that discrimination and inequality as between shippers and maladjustment of freight rates between competing markets and trade centers may be abolished or minimized; that the public may be assured of reasonable and stable freight rates which will at the same time afford air returns upon capital investment; that the interest of investors in American railcoad securities may be protected; and that undue inflation of capitalization and fraudulent or speculative manipulation of business by directors or other interests in control may be prevented, we recommend: "That the policy of governmental super-

MEDICAL BOARD MANDATED.

It Had Refused to Recognize an Iowa School of Osteopathy. DES MOINES, Feb. 9.-District Judge Holmes has directed the issuance of a writ of mandamus to compel the State Board of Medical Examiners to issue cerlege of Osteopathy, in Des Moines, Ia., within the provisions of the statutes. The board has refused to issue certificates to the ground that the standard of the schools was not satisfactory. The law provides that the board shall issue certificates to graduates of those institutions which are in good repute as osteopathic colleges. An arbitrary standard was fixed by the board.

C. T. Parsons, of Des Moines, applied for a writ of mandamus to compel the board to issue him a certificate under the law. Judge Holmes, deciding the case, said
